Theft victim blames switched-off lights

A BUSINESS owner has blamed Northamptonshire County Council's decision to turn off all the street lights in a Northampton industrial estate for causing a burglary of £5,000 worth of equipment from his premises.

On Sunday night, thieves cut through a fence next to a lamppost which was switched off by the county council last year and stole two catalytic converters from vans parked in a secure compound in Round Spinney owned by Euro Towers Ltd.

Roger Verallo, managing director of the business, said he blamed the county council for the burglary as he said street lighting would have acted as a deterrent for thieves.

Mr Verallo has written to county council chief executive, Paul Blantern, calling for more support for businesses in Round Spinney.

Mr Verallo said: "The cut to the fence was made where there is a lamppost but of course no light. I hold the council totally to be the cause of this incident."

"We have been on this estate for 18 years, a British manufacturer bringing employment, money and prestige to Northampton for this we receive nothing from 'our' council."

Mr Verallo's wife Sue said businesses in Round Spinney were wondering what they paid their rates for as the roads were not in a good state.

Mrs Verallo said: "As soon as it gets dark the estate is pitch black. There is no support from the council for businesses down here."

"We are a good employer for the town and have 50 staff. The council should be trying to make our life easier."

A spokesman for Northamptonshire County Council said the local authority had liaised with police in deciding which lights to switch off.

The spokesman said: "The lights haven't been turned off on an ad-hoc basis. We've worked hard to establish a rationale, available at www.northamptonshire.gov.uk/streetlights and have liaised closely with the police to help make our decisions. We continue to liaise with the police and monitor any feedback we receive to stay aware of any issues which arise. In addition a new PFI scheme will see all of the county's street lighting stock replaced over the next five years. The new, modern lighting system will provide a more consistent, better quality of light and will be much cheaper to run."

Gold Street to re-open to drivers in new plans

NEW plans have been revealed to open up Gold Street in Northampton to motorists, a little over two years since traffic was banned from the town centre road.

In August 2009, a six-month, £6 million redevelopment of Gold Street was completed.

The work saw narrow pavements along the street widened and all vehicles, apart from buses, taxis and delivery vehicles, banned from using the street.

But under new plans revealed by Northamptonshire County Council yesterday, cars could soon be allowed to travel along Gold Street again.

One of the most outspoken people against the 2009 alterations was Gold Street cafe owner, Albert Sgoluppi.

Despite the plans meaning traffic would pass his business again, he said the change would be "useless" as the previous works had got rid of all the parking spaces in the street.

He said: "I'm speechless at the stupidity of it all. People can't stop in Gold Street now, so it won't help us at all."

"A lot of people will use it as a short-cut, but there will be no benefit to Gold Street at all because there is nowhere for anybody to park."

"They should have left it as it was before spending all that money on it in the first place."

Under the plans, all the traffic using Gold Street would have to travel one way towards All Saints Church from Marefair.

Attempt at world record

HUNDREDS of children from primary schools in Daventry will take part in a world record breaking attempt. A total of 365 pupils from Falconer's Hill Infant School and St James Infant School on St James Street will be attempting to break the record for the most people signing and singing a song simultaneously on February 8. The event has been organised by the charity SignHealth.

Funding for sport clubs

SPORTS clubs can apply for funding to provide opportunities for young people to try out new sports. Funding, available through South Northamptonshire Council, the Lottery and Sports England Sportivate programme, could mean a chance for anyone aged between 14 and 25 to try new activities, and a boost to club membership. For details email tom.kittendorf@south-northants.gov.uk or call 01327 322078.

Self service is on trial

A NEW self-service system is being trialled in Daventry District Council's one stop shop. Customers can log on to the council's website at its offices, in Lodge Road, to find information. Customer advisors are on hand to talk to residents and explain how the system works, so customers will be able to access information from home in future.

Petition to save PCSOs

AN online petition has been launched by a Northampton housewife to save PCSOs in the town. Judy Whitmore called on residents to come together following proposed budget cuts by Northampton Borough and Northamptonshire County Councils. The petition will be presented to both councils and the police authority. It can be signed at www.ipetitions.com/petition/save-northampton-pcsos

John Hemmings and his son Daniel with the returned kart

Stolen racing kart is returned to its owner

A STOLEN racing kart has been anonymously returned to its teenage owner five days after it went missing.

Thieves stole 15-year-old Daniel Hemmings' racing kart, tools and a generator from the garage of his grandparents in Friars Crescent, Delapre, Northampton, between 10.45pm on Thursday, January 19, and 9.30am on Friday, January 20.

However the kart was returned, undamaged, to the outside of his home at around 10pm last Tuesday evening.

Caroline Chisholm School pupil Daniel, from High Street, Wootton, who has won more than 25 trophies while racing for his club - Stretton Circuit Kart Club in Leicestershire - spent three years building the kart.

His dad John said: "We weren't expecting to see it again after it had been stolen so this is a shock, but we are just pleased to have it back. It's not damaged in any way and it does not look like it has been driven. Daniel is so relieved and it means he can carry on with his racing without any problems."

The tools and generator have not yet been found.

Only quarter of A&E patients need ambulance

ALMOST two thirds of people who attended A&E at Northampton General Hospital in a 12-month period were not taken by ambulance.

Accident and emergency doctors and nurses have been consistently seeing huge numbers of people each day for more than a year leading to a raft of measures being rolled out by the NHS to relieve the department.

Statistics published show that between 2010 and 2011 more than 59 per cent of A&E patients got there under their own steam, with only a quarter needing an ambulance.

Watchdog members questioned whether all those 'walk-ins' really needed emergency treatment.

Moya McVicar, of the patient watchdog Northamptonshire LINK, said: "Many people do get someone to drive them to hospital and they are genuine A&E cases.

"But I think there are huge numbers who don't know what else to do when they feel a bit poorly but go to hospital. The doctor's surgery shuts at 5pm so they think the only other place is Northampton General."

NHS Northamptonshire has been desperately trying to get the message out that there are a range of NHS services for patients between their doctor and A&E.

The NHS Direct telephone service, pharmacies, and the minor injuries unit should all be considered before choosing the emergency department, health bosses say.

Elsewhere, the new figures suggest that, despite its problems, NGH is not faring much worse than other English hospitals.

The average waiting time after an initial assessment between April 2010 and March 2011 was two hours 28 minutes at NGH, just two minutes longer than the national average for England.

NHS Northamptonshire bosses have been struggling to find a pattern in the type of person they need to target with their 'choose the right medical service' message.

But national statistics published yesterday show most people visiting the emergency department in a 12-month period were aged in their twenties.

Roger Helmer MEP and his expected successor, Rupert Matthews

Stand-off over MEP's replacement

NORTHAMPTON'S MEP has said he will revoke his resignation if the stand-off over his replacement is not resolved.

Conservative MEP Roger Helmer, who represents the entire East Midlands region, was due to stand down from his post in December.

But a storm has erupted between him and the Conservative party's head office over his expected successor, Blisworth publisher Rupert Matthews, who has raised eyebrows amongst members because of his unconventional interests.

The Conservative Party is being accused of being reluctant to appoint Mr Matthews because of his paranormal expertise.

He also attracted controversy when he published a pamphlet on 'Political Correctness' which featured gollies on the cover.

In 2009 the Conservatives party won two MEP seats in the Euro elections, given to the first two on the candidate list, Mr Helmer and Emma McClarkin, while Mr Matthews was the unsuccessful runner-up. By convention the next on the party list succeeds if any MEP dies or resigns. In this case that would be Mr Matthews.

Mr Helmer said: "Rupert Matthews runs a small publishing business and publishes a wide range of titles, largely about history, a line in children's books and a handful on the paranormal and some political issues. It is a business which makes money and he's found a good market for books about the paranormal. The assumption that he's therefore a nutter is absurd.

"I take my role seriously and I am prepared to do it until the end of the term in 2014 unless the party do the decent thing."

But a spokesman for the Conservative Party's central office said there is currently no vacancy to fill, and therefore could not confirm who would be a replacement.

Budget alterations to be announced

ALTERATIONS to Northamptonshire County Council's planned budget cuts are expected to be published this month.

The council revealed plans to cut £28 million from its budget last month. Controversial proposals included cutting funding from Police Community Support Officers (PCSOs) and scrapping almost 300 jobs.

But during a meeting to discuss the plans at County Hall, it was revealed that changes made in the light of public responses to the plans would be revealed during the middle of February.

Opposition councillor, Julie Brookfield (Lab, Shire Lodge) said the reduction of funding for PCSOs was, in her opinion, one of the most controversial issues.

She said: "The cuts to PCSOs would have a major impact on people."

A final decision on the council's budget will be made on February 23.

Busy half term ahead

YOUNGSTERS in Daventry can keep busy during the February half-term with sports and dance camps, and arts and crafts sessions. Both will run from February 13 to 17 and cost £30 for the week or £10 per day. An arts and crafts camp, suitable for ages five to 15, will run between 10am until 3pm from February 15 to 17. Places cost £20 for the three days or £10 per day. To book call Daventry Active's sports development co-ordinator, Alex Le Guével, on 01327 302350 or email aleguel@daventrydc.gov.uk

Defrosting car stolen

MOTORISTS have been warned after a car was stolen while the owner left the engine running to defrost the windscreen. The incident happened at around 8am on Friday in Chatsworth Avenue, Northampton, when the victim heard the vehicle being driven away at speed after going back into the house for a brief moment. A police spokesperson said: "It is vital that vehicles are clear of frost and snow before driving, but we would always advise motorists to stay with their vehicle whilst defrosting. People may assume that nothing will happen in a few minutes, however what might only seem like a few minutes in the house, can provide the small window of time an opportunistic thief needs."

Morse author at school

THE creator of Inspector Morse spoke to pupils during an evening to celebrate a full refurbishment of one of Northamptonshire's smallest primary schools.

Colin Dexter, the award-winning author whose detective novels have received widespread acclaim and inspired a long-running television series, visited Brampton Primary School on Thursday and told pupils stories from his own childhood experiences.

Parent governor, Maria Jackson, said: "Colin Dexter was quite funny. He was talking about growing up and getting through school, and about how music and reading kept him sane."

The school, in Harlestone Road, Chapel Brampton, was celebrating the completion of a full refurbishment, including a renovation of the library.

Drastic fall in number of officers

POLICE chiefs are ready to lift a two-and-a-half-year recruitment freeze at Northamptonshire Police following an alarming fall in officer numbers.

It has emerged police numbers in Northamptonshire have reduced so drastically over the last 18 months that the number of full-time officers in the county has now fallen below the benchmark "establishment", which the force sets itself.

Last Thursday, Home Office figures revealed 75 police officers left the force between September 2010 and September 2011.

However, the thin blue line has shed a further 64 officers since then, with officers leaving or being seconded away from the force. The total number of full-time equivalents is now only 1,242.

It means the number of officers in the county is currently below "appropriate" levels.

Northamptonshire Police currently sets the figure of officers the county needs at 1,270, meaning officer numbers have now fallen below that level. Furthermore, the figures do not include PCSO losses, which could rise to almost 50 officers if council funding for community officers is withdrawn.

The force is ready to ask Northamptonshire Police Authority to approve plans to lift a long-term staff freeze and recruit new officers at a meeting next month.

Chief Constable Adrian Lee said: "The force has to reduce in size in order to achieve significant savings over the coming years. However we remain committed to doing that in a way that minimises the effect on frontline services.

"Like most forces, we had anticipated that officers seconded to other organisations, (for example the National Police Improvement Agency), would return to the force. This has not yet happened, but when it does the number of officers in the force will rise accordingly. Even in light of the above, the force will need to recruit a small number of officers to ensure it retains appropriate officer strength.

"This will happen over the coming months."

Print works transformed into a stage

PART of the Chronicle & Echo's former printing works will be transformed into a stage for the Royal & Derngate's 2012 season.

The Bacchae, to be staged at the Chron's offices in Upper Mounts, Northampton will mark the start of a trilogy of plays called the Festival of Chaos and will feature in the Cultural Olympiad's London 2012 Festival.

Actors will perform the play, a Greek tragedy by Euripides, in the Chron's redundant inserting room, where supplements and brochures were once inserted in to the paper immediately after printing.

Assistant editor of the Chron, Peter Clarke, said: "We've been working with Royal & Derngate since before Christmas to iron out any issues with this project and the Chron is delighted it is going ahead.

"It will mean a lot of work to convert a dark, dirty, echoing hall into a theatre but we are looking forward to seeing the transformation."

The room has not been used since September 2008, when printing of the Chron was transferred to Peterborough.

The trilogy, part of Royal & Derngate's Made in Northampton 2012 season, will run from May to July. It has been chosen to feature as part of the London 2012 Festival, a 12-week nationwide event celebrating the Olympics.

All three shows will be directed by the theatre's artistic director, Laurie Sansom, with the latter two, Blood Wedding and Hedda Gabler, being performed on the more conventional theatre stage.

The key theme of the trilogy is the battle between ordered civilisation and chaos.

London 2012 Cultural Olympiad director, Ruth Mackenzie, said: "Festival of Chaos is one of our most exciting events in the UK wide London Festival 2012, and the Northampton and Northamptonshire communities are lucky to have such a treat for the Summer of 2012."

The Chron will offer full seating and access provision, and parking will be available nearby.

Tickets can be booked now by calling the theatre box office on Northampton 624811.

Olympic lions roar into market square

THREE giant crocheted lions are to visit Northampton this summer as part of a tour of the East Midlands in the build-up to the Olympic Games.

The Lionheart Project will see the three large lions, which have been two years in the making, travel the country in a 16-metre long, illuminated glass case, starting on May 1 in Derbyshire.

The lions will then tour the East Midlands, including a week-long stay in Northampton's Market Square, before arriving at the Natural History Museum, in London, in time for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The golden animals have been created using 36 miles of Swaledale wool.

The idea is one of 12 Arts Council England projects that will form part of the London 2012 Cultural Olympiad.

Shauna Richardson, the artist who created the lions, said: "Here was an exciting opportunity to think big and create something spectacular in the East Midlands that would celebrate the region.

"Through my practice I came into contact with the theory that anything can be art. With Lionheart Project I am using objects and traditional craft to explore this. After two years crocheting the lions I am looking forward to surprising people with the finished piece on the road."

Police called to 200 domestic incidents a week

POLICE have revealed they are called to more than 10,000 reports of domestic abuse in Northamptonshire every year.

The figures, released by Northamptonshire Police, show officers as well as staff from the force's dedicated domestic abuse unit are called to around 200 violent domestic disturbances every week across the county.

Senior officers have previously said they are now being called to domestic disturbances more often, with people staying at home to drink alcohol instead of going to the pub.

Inspector Andy Glenn, from the police domestic abuse unit, said his team, which comprises of both police officers and police staff, deal with all types of domestic abuse cases.

He said: "We take incidents of domestic abuse extremely seriously and offer as much assistance to victims as possible, whether that be helping them seek refuge, make a criminal complaint or find support from a partner organisation.

"Our primary aim in any domestic abuse case is to make sure that the victim is safe.

"Once that has happened we can work with them to see if a criminal case can be pursued and bring the offender to justice."

Northamptonshire Police currently employs four domestic abuse advisors, who have recently been moved from police headquarters at Wootton Hall into police stations around the county.

The advisors are members of police staff and work as part of the unit to make contact with victims to offer support and advice and, if necessary, refer them to specialist agencies such as Victim Support, the Sunflower Centre or Women's Aid.

Insp Glenn added: "Our specialist police officers focus on those cases where there is a high risk of harm to victim.

"However, we recognise that abuse isn't only about serious violence or sexual abuse and can also take the form of harassment, manipulation, financial or psychological abuse.

"That's where our Domestic Abuse Advisors play an important role."

Last week, the Home Office released statistics showed in the last 12 months police recorded more than 10,000 violent crimes, as well as 745 sexual assaults.

Remembering the Holocaust

HOLOCAUST Memorial Day was marked by a series of events in Northampton, including a flower-laying service in the courtyard of The Guildhall.

A ceremony was attended by Northampton borough councillors and community groups, who were all invited to spare a moment to remember those who have been, or are, victims of hate crime, bullying, stigma or prejudice.

A series of events also took place at The University of Northampton to mark Holocaust Memorial Day.

Conservative MP for Northampton North, Michael Ellis, was at the Park Campus to open the event and listen to a keynote lecture entitled "Why we need to think about the Holocaust perpetrators" by Professor Dan Stone.

Mr Ellis said: "I think it is important the university organises events like this so we always remember and stop this from happening again."

Fame for hero of shop attack

THE story of a Northamptonshire shopkeeper who fought off robbers with a mop, has spread across the world.

Images of Dinesh Gorania and his son Kishan have been broadcast as far away as India and America along with news of their amazing bravery.

When faced with three masked men attempting to rob his shop in Church Hall Road, Rushden, last week, the 52-year-old fought the gang off with only a mop.

Dinesh, who has run the store for 20 years, was helped by 21-year-old Kishan, who armed himself with a hockey stick.

Since then they have been inundated with calls from national newspapers, magazines and television. He said: "We have had a lot of interest; my phone has been ringing non-stop."

"It's been on every channel and in all the papers. It's even gone to America, Germany and India."

"But I am a normal man and I will be pleased to get back to normal."

He added: "I am very pleased with the way the police investigation has been going and I hope they catch them soon."

The investigation was launched after the attempted robbery took place shortly before 10pm last Friday.

Dinesh was getting ready to shut the shop and was mopping up, while Kishan was taking in signs from outside the store when three masked men pulled up in a car.

The masked man went into the store but Dinesh hit him with the mop. The man tried twice more to get back in but Dinesh used the mop to repeatedly hit him, while Kishan grabbed a hockey stick to keep the man away.

Two other masked men got out of the car, with one throwing a metal bar at Dinesh, which he managed to block with his forearm.

After being unable to force their way into the store the men got back into their car, pulled around the corner into Rose Avenue and the first man got out of the car and smashed the windows of Dinesh's van and Kishan's car.

A Northamptonshire Police spokesman said: "Thankfully in this case, the victims were not harmed, but we would always direct people to call the police on 999 as soon as possible and not put themselves in harm's way."

New bus station proposals on show for public

PLANS to build a new bus station in Northampton town centre will be available for the public to comment on until the end of this week.

Councillors propose to knock down the current Greyfriars building and replace it with a new £8 million bus station on the site of the Fishmarket in Sheep Street.

Members of Northampton Bus Users Group had the opportunity to question the plans in detail at a public meeting on Saturday.

While some members of the group conceded the run-down Greyfriars station and its 'scary' underpasses needed to go, others were concerned about the lack of space and undercover areas at the proposed replacement site.

Matt Hammon, from Northamptonshire County Council's contractors, MGWSP, insisted the bus station had to be moved to allow regeneration of the town.

He told the meeting: "There is a lot of understanding from people that for the regeneration of the town and the Grosvenor Centre to happen, certain things have to happen and the bus station is part of that."

"The Fishmarket has its constraints but we are mitigating those and doing the best we can."

He added: "If this doesn't get approved then the shopping centre won't be developed. But there is no guarantee that it will be once the bus station is built."

The bus users expressed their concerns about passengers often being forced to wait outside in the rain and emphasised the need for cover.

Michael Barlow, chairman of the bus users group, said: "You are going back to before the days of Greyfriars and creating a station where people will be forced to wait in the rain."

"We will need salubrious shelters."

Alan Jones added: "The council could be shooting itself in the foot by discouraging people from coming into the town centre to use the shops because they will be forced to wait on the street."

The new station will have an indoor waiting area, public toilets, a cafe and shops.

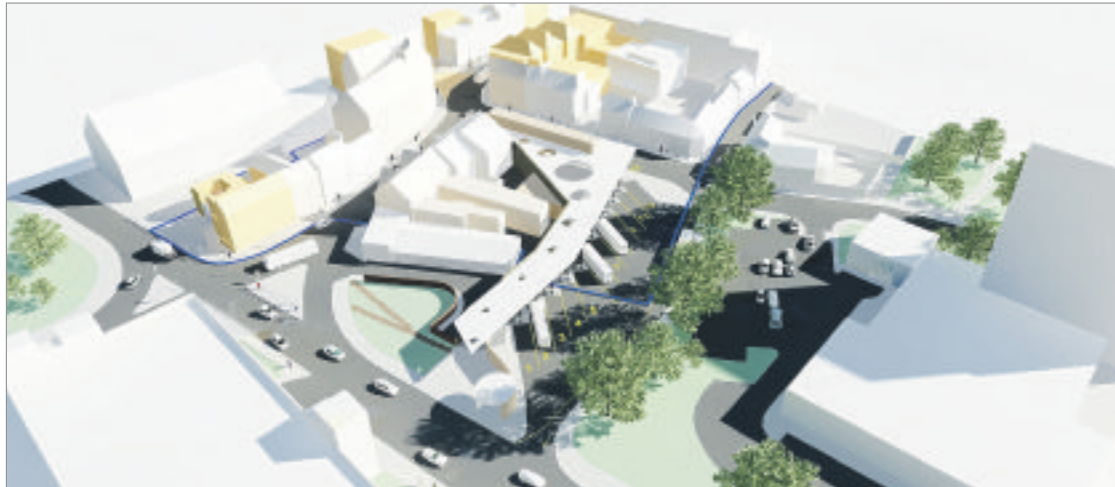

It will have 12 bus bays and a further seven bus stops will be created along The Drapery.

It is hoped that the new bus station could be built by August 2013.

The development is being jointly promoted by WNDC,

Northamptonshire County Council and Northampton Borough Council.

The plans are due to be submitted in February and will be subject to a six-month archaeological investigation into a possible historic Jewish synagogue site under the building.

MP welcomes job boost at proposed enterprise zone

THE Government's business secretary, Vince Cable, has said he expects more than 10,000 new jobs to be created in Northampton's 'enterprise zone' over the coming years.

The MP visited the town to look round the 300-acre regeneration area which stretches from Sixfields to Bedford Road.

The Government backed the creation of the enterprise zone last year and it is hoped that tax breaks and eased planning regulations in the area will attract many new businesses to the town.

During his visit to see the area, Mr Cable said: "The authorities in Northampton have got some good plans for this enterprise zone, so I think eventually, there will be well beyond 10,000 new jobs created here."

"It will build gradually, but it will provide a real boost for the town."

To build on the success of Northamptonshire-based companies such as Cosworth, Mercedes-Benz High Performance Engines and Silverstone, the enterprise zone has been set up with the aim of attracting more top-flight engineering companies to the town.

Mr Cable said: "This area has a number of really good high performance engineering firms."

"I've been to Northampton to visit Cosworth's factory in the past and if we can attract more businesses like that, there's a great future for the area."

As well as touring the enterprise zone and meeting council officials at the Guildhall, the Liberal Democrat MP also looked round the new village of Upton and spoke to young builders working on the development.

He said: "I think Upton is looking very nice."

"It's a very imaginative development with a real sense of community."

"And it's also creating jobs for young people in the building trade, which has to be welcomed."

Planning permission for the first development in Northampton's enterprise zone was granted by the West Northamptonshire Development Corporation (WNDC) earlier this month.

The scheme will see a six-storey, glass cube built opposite the town's railway station at a cost of £6.5 million.

The cube will be used by new businesses, including ones created as a result of research at the University of Northampton.

Plan to become fairtrade town

PLANS are to be put forward by Towcester's mayor for the town to become a Fairtrade Town.

Hundreds of towns from across the country, including Buckingham and Bicester, have agreed to campaign for a better deal for farmers in the third world.

Councillor Martin Johns will be putting a proposal to councillors in February and said: "Towcester becoming a Fairtrade Town would benefit both our local business community as well as suppliers and producers in developing countries."

A Fairtrade Town is an area that has made a commitment to supporting fairtrade and using products with the Fairtrade mark.

To coincide with Fairtrade Fortnight, Churches Together in Towcester are planning a craft fair for March 3 in the Town Hall.

Primary school aims to make maths more fun

PUPILS at a Northampton primary school enjoyed a day of maths puzzles, games and challenges.

Children at Simon de Senlis School, in East Hunsbury, took part in the activities last Thursday designed to make maths fun and exciting.

Rachel Rosevear, numeracy co-ordinator at the school, said the objective of the day had been achieved as the children had been taught important maths skills.

Ms Rosevear said: "It's important for them to develop problem solving skills and ways of organising, which can be transferred into everyday life.

"It's also a fantastic opportunity to boost the children's confidence and self-esteem, as well as allowing them to work interactively and collaboratively with their parents."

Headteacher Elliot Howles said: "We need to make maths fun and exciting for children.

"We believe that this is central to improving maths ability and developing a passion and understanding for the subject.

"Days like these are just one of the ways we do this."

Reward scheme set up for heroes of armed forces

A REWARD scheme for armed forces members and their families, launched in Northampton, hopes to reach thousands more people with a new website.

Rewards for Forces, set up by businessman Peter Raith, in Moulton Park, went live with its new website this month, alongside a card scheme for members to use in high street stores.

Across the UK, 1,300 companies offer benefits to serving and former armed forces members and their immediate families.

Peter, who started the scheme after a career linked with the armed forces, said: "When one person serves, their whole family serves, so it's important that their families are rewarded because they are going through it too."

"These companies are signing up because they recognise what the Armed Forces do or have done for our country."

"We're gradually becoming more like America in showing our support."

"There are potentially thousands of former or currently serving members who are not signed up and missing out."

Rewards for Forces was set up seven years ago to encourage companies to show support to the armed services by offering special discounts, unavailable to the general public.

The business makes its revenue from charging companies to advertise the discounts on the site.

Ex-service members can advertise their own business and discounts for free on the website.

Visit www.rewardsforforces.co.uk for details.

New cancer unit opens its doors to patients

THE new Macmillan Haematology Suite at Northampton General Hospital opened its doors to its first patients, with many praising the improvements made.

The £2.2 million unit – which will treat patients with blood cancers like leukaemia, lymphoma and myeloma – has been the subject of an 18-month fundraising campaign by the Chronicle & Echo and Macmillan Cancer Support, for which about £700,000 is still needed.

Among the first patients treated at the new-look unit was 97-year-old Edith Gotch, who lives in The Headlands and has been attending the hospital for treatment for nearly two years.

She said: "I was very surprised when I came in how bright and cheerful it was, and what an improvement it was from what we had before. The old place was comfortable but old-fashioned – like going to visit your grandma's house – and crowded. This is lovely, and such a difference."

Maurice Kent, aged 76, from Moulton, was also being treated at the unit. He said: "I've been in here when it was the old unit and this is an absolute transformation. There is so much space, and all the facilities are on hand where they need to be."

His wife Sheila added: "The waiting room used to be so crowded and there sometimes weren't enough seats. Now there is more space and there are more facilities for families and friends."

Staff also praised the new unit, which saw about 50 patients on its first day of operation, despite a few minor problems early on.

Dr Angela Bowen, consultant haematologist, said: "We are all absolutely delighted with the unit. It is a wonderful space we have needed for a long time. Already in just one day of being open our patients can see the benefits to the space and the new facilities available for them."

medical director and consultant haematologist, said: "Everyone has been very impressed and patients and staff walking in have said it is nicer than they thought it could be, bearing in mind it was reconstructed on the original unit footprint."

"It's a nice fresh environment and there is lots of space. I think we are all looking forward to a new lease of life and perhaps a fresh beginning."

Top, patient Edith Gotch and ward sister Nettie Steele, and, above, Sheila and Maurice Kent at the new Macmillan Haematology Suite

ROADTEST: Nissan Juke Accenta Premium 1.5 dci

Dividing opinions

REVIEW BY IAN
DONALDSON

TURNING into the hospital approach road in my distinctive Juke, what was coming the other way at the lights? Yep, another one.

Two minutes later, looking for a parking space in a crowded visitors' car park I spotted... yes, another Juke, with space alongside. And in the same colour as the test car.

"Hope the owner doesn't try to get into the wrong one," was my first thought. My second was to avoid the car parked at the far end of my bay. Of course, it was Juke number four.

Which tells me two things (at least); that Nissan's distinctive take on a crossover (a mix between conventional hatch and butch SUV) is both popular with the punters and not as unusual a sight as an owner might like.

Part of its attraction must be the way it seems to provide more car for your money, a product of standing taller than most rivals and looking mean and moody at the same time.

Prices range from £13,395 to £20,295 and there's a choice of petrol and diesel engines, manual or auto gearboxes and, on one of the pricier models, four-wheel drive.

Nearly every Juke will be front drive only and if an owner can find the £1,400 premium for diesel over petrol, ought to be fuelled by the smelly stuff – not only for its impressive fuel figures but also for the way it drives.

But before we get into the Juke's road manners, there is the styling to consider. It surely dominates every possible owner's buying decision.

This is a true Marmite car; you'll either love its standout looks or think it resembles something from a child's attempt at drawing mummy's car.

Happily for Nissan, there are thousands of people who think this Sunderland-built sweetie is the best thing since sliced toast (with Marmite, of course).

If the bulges and sweeping contours on the outside do it for you then you'll probably enjoy a seat inside. Nissan talks about a motorcycle influence in the cabin and the shrouded instrument panel and petrol tank-like bulge between the front seats have a two-wheeler feel.

More sci-fi than biker is a dial that can tell you how much g-force you pulled round the last corner, which never moved in my company and looked like a waste of money.

Look beyond this gimmick and beneath the glitz sits a broadly conventional hatchback. Which is mostly good news, with its diesel engine sounding gruff from cold but turning quieter as things warm up and providing surprisingly punchy performance.

It drives with some precision, no doubt helped by a ride that can turn choppy on the worst roads. The front seats look nothing special, even in their premium fabric, but proved thoroughly comfortable.

My test car showed 56mpg on the trip computer, a much closer approach to the quoted Euro figure than most cars manage. The figure must have been helped by the Juke's willingness to accept a high gear from low speed without the faintest protest.

There's enough room inside for a growing family and the boot floor conceals a second luggage area, but no spare wheel (there's a can of gloop instead).

Standard kit on my car included satellite navigation, reversing camera, cruise control, alloy wheels, six speaker sound system with Bluetooth and electric windows all round.

When she was just a girl, she expected the world, but it flew away from her reach, so she ran away in her sleep and is now in paradise. She is at rest with the Angels now. Enjoy it in paradise Mum, love you so much and your memories will live in us forever.

HAIGH Kath

Funeral will be taking place at 2.45p.m. on Friday 3rd February, at the Crematorium (Milton Malsor) and afterwards at the Bakers Arms in Bugbrooke.

Kath did not want people to be sad, and therefore one of her requests was that her funeral should be colourful and joyful to celebrate her life, so the brighter the better.

She also requested that whilst she loved flowers,
 she would like family flowers only.

Should others like to give something then please donate to either Cynthia Spencer Hospice at home team, Age UK or Macmillan, as without their amazing support her final wishes would not have been met.

Thank you everyone for your wonderful support

The University of Northampton is the County's only higher education institution and enjoys an excellent reputation locally, regionally, nationally and internationally. The University has ambitious plans for increasing the level and amount of research and knowledge transfer funding generated across all six of its academic schools. The award winning Office of Research and Strategic Bidding is a small team (3 FTE staff) that exists to facilitate and support bidding activities that will generate this income. We wish to appoint two enthusiastic, positive individuals in order to provide maternity cover to this team and to support the University in fulfilling its ambitions.

Research and Strategic Bidding Manager

£35,938 - £44,166 per annum

(Fixed-term until May 2013)

Reporting to the Director of Finance and Commercial Services, you will manage and motivate the Bidding Team in order to maximise opportunities for income generation while delivering first class customer service, as well as managing the University's Research Excellence Framework (REF) 2014 submission. You will maintain an oversight of bidding activity across the university and manage relationships, both between the office and the schools and also with our external partners. An excellent, persuasive communicator capable of presenting complex information effectively, you should have a working knowledge of the research funding landscape and the principles and practice of REF 2014. You will have worked in a Higher Education organisation and be able to demonstrate success in project management and supporting funding applications.

Quote ref: KS11019.

Research and Strategic Bidding Officer

£31,020 - £34,895 per annum

(Fixed-term until January 2013)

In addition, you will monitor and report bidding activity, assist in the preparation of bids and tenders to funders and work to develop partnerships with other organisations in order to strengthen bids. You will have an awareness/experience of bidding and research funding, preferably within an HE environment. You will have excellent communication skills and be numerate and IT literate.

Quote ref: KS11020.

For an informal discussion about these opportunities, please contact Karen Lewis, Research and Strategic Bidding Manager on (01604) 892844.

Clarke's a good fit for Cobblers

CLARKE CARLISLE became the latest addition to the Cobblers cause on a reasonably busy transfer deadline day at Sixfields.

The defender, who was recently on loan at Preston North End, has signed a loan deal until the end of the season from npower Championship club Burnley.

Midfielder Ben Harding, who was already with Town on a loan deal from Wycombe Wanderers, made his move permanent, and two players – full-back Ashley Corker and second-year professional goalkeeper Paul Walker – had their deals terminated.

Also arriving were goalkeeper Neal Kitson, who comes in from the USL Professional Division in the United States, and striker Lewis Wilson from UCL side Newport Pagnell Town.

The recruitment of Carlisle, who played under manager Aidy Boothroyd in the duo's time together at Watford six years ago, is being seen as something of a coup in league two circles, for both the experience and leadership qualities he brings to the squad and his on-pitch attributes.

"Clarke is a player I have worked with before," said Boothroyd. "He is a leader in every sense of the word. He has won three promotions with three different clubs, he has played in the Premier League and he is a winner."

"He is a very strong character on and off the pitch, and he is just the sort of player we need to help us get the club back to where we believe we should be."

Writing on Twitter, Carlisle said: "Hello to #NTFC and all their fans! It's a pleasure to join up with Aidy again and I hope I can contribute to the battle for survival."

Northampton were linked with several players during Tuesday's deadline day, with the names of Millwall winger Chris Hackett and Cardiff City striker Jon Parkin also in the frame.

Gabor Gyepes, who was a huge success as a player at Sixfields three years ago, also stirred some interest among the supporters after he was released by the Bluebirds, but his representatives confirmed to the Chron that he would not be looking to rejoin his old club at this stage.

Of the other two new players arriving, Boothroyd said: "Neal has come over from the States to prove himself. He comes highly recommended and he has done very well on trial."

On the subject of Wilson, Boothroyd added, "One of our scouts, Simon Brown, picked up him playing for Newport Pagnell and he came in on trial."

"He is one for the future, but he will have a chance to impress between now and the end of the season. He has a lot of pace and has enormous potential."

The Cobblers are in npower League Two action this Saturday when they entertain Macclesfield (ko 3pm). Town are still bottom of the table, having lost 1-0 at promotion-chasing Torquay last weekend.

BAGS OF EXPERIENCE - Clarke Carlisle has signed on loan for the Cobblers from npower Championship side Burnley until the end of the season

Stewart backing Scotland

FORMER Saints prop Matt Stewart believes Scotland's superior experience will see them edge past England in the opening Six Nations clash at Murrayfield on Saturday.

Saints flanker Calum Clark was released by England last night, but Stuart Lancaster could still pick five Northampton players in his starting line-up.

Dylan Hartley, Ben Foden and Chris Ashton look certain to start, while Lee Dickson is battling Ben Youngs for the scrum-half starting spot and Phil Dowson has a chance to break into the England back row, with Ben Morgan and Tom Croft his rivals to partner skipper Chris Robshaw.

Stewart, who won 34 caps for Scotland, feels Robshaw is emblematic of England's inexperience at this level.

"He only has one cap and he is second choice behind Tom Wood," said Stewart. "He has done okay for his club, but it is another world jumping up to international level."

"England have an inexperienced back row and when you look around the team there is not that much experience in terms of caps. Scotland have Dan Parks and Chris Cusiter at half-back, both very experienced at this level. England have to put them under pressure otherwise Parks will kick them all round the park."

And looking at England's scrum, Stewart feels it is time for former Saint Euan Murray to deliver:

"England have to get the edge up front to put Parks under pressure," said Stewart. "Alex Corbisiero had a very good first season for England, but he needs to back that up now."

"At international level you very rarely see teams getting smashed up front. Scotland are good up front. Murray is a good tighthead but he has never been consistent enough to be called world class. Scotland need him to step up and be consistent."

"It will be a tight game, there won't be much in it, but I think Scotland will just edge it because of that extra experience and being at home in front of a passionate crowd."

Stewart was not pleased to see Scotland coach Andy Robinson label England 'arrogant' before the game.

"I prefer to keep my mouth shut ahead of games," said Stewart. "That can go one of two ways and he might have riled the English."

"He was trying to provoke a reaction out of his players. They need to back him up now."

Saints are also in action on Saturday. They face Wasps in the LV= Cup at Franklin's Gardens (ko 3pm) knowing that a win will seal them a place in the semi-finals. A severely depleted Saints were trounced 46-14 at Bath in the LV= Cup last Saturday.
